Library Subject Headings

The ASU Library and most academic libraries use the Library of Congress Classification system instead of Dewey but it works in a similar fashion. You will find these main classes (see below) in the library. For example, the books on the shelf with the “call letter” starting with “U” will be have something to do with the topic of military science. The books starting with the call letter “T” will in some way be about technology, and so on.

B: Philosophy ; Psychology ; Religion

K: Law

D-DR: World History and History of Europe

L: Education

DS –DX: History of Asia, Africa, Australia, New Zealand

Q: Science (Mathematics)

E-F: History of the Americas

T: Technology

H: Social Sciences (Business, Leadership)

U: Military Science

J: Political Science

V: Naval Science

Argument Papers

Choose topics you argue succinctly with confidence.

It is easier to make a case for something that matters to you and/or your work.

Avoid large, unwieldy topics that would require deeper exploration, explanation beyond the bounds of the assignment.

Back up your opinions with evidence.

The ASU Library can make your life easier and help you succeed with the assignment.

- Librarians and staff will help you find resources, show you how to use those resources or answer any other questions you might have.
- The library has print books, e-books, databases and other resources
- Indexes and articles tend to have excellent information for the argument assignment as they are generally brief, current, and give the researcher enough information without having to go in depth. However, books can also be useful depending on the topic.

In the Advanced Search function EBSCO enables you to refine your search by limiting your key words to the Title & Abstract or other areas (see right). You can also limit your search by other features such as date. You can use Boolean search strings (AND, OR, NOT) to search terms. Using variations of a concept/term (U.S. military) will broaden your search and using quotations in EBSCO will ensure it searches the exact phrase. Within the quotations you see the * which is called a “wildcard” or truncation and will search any variation of letters attached to the root word “literac” such as literacy and literacies as they may show up on different forms in the search results and you don’t want to miss them. You may find that you will have to broaden or narrow your search depending on your results. Database search is an iterative process and we can often help you uncover more information than you realize is available.

Searching ABI Inform ProQuest

The screenshot shows a search results page with a sidebar of filters. A purple oval highlights the following sections:

- SUBJECT
 - Aircraft
 - Command and control
 - Artificial intelligence
 - Cooperation
 - Ammunition
 - Sensors
 - Alliances
 - Logistics
 - Military personnel
 - Armed forces
 - Information technology
 - Military
 - Economic
- LOCATION
 - United States-US
 - India
 - Guam
 - Australia
 - China
 - Japan
 - South Korea
 - Indo-Pacific region
- COMPANY/ORGANIZATION
 - Department of the Army

A "Search" button is located at the bottom right of the filter sidebar.

ProQuest offers many of the same search features as EBSCO. Here a precision search using “contested logistics” AND (INDOPACOM OR “indo pacific” searching only the abstract returned five results. In this instance the researcher was looking for a bit more so when clicking on a relevant article, they see that to the right of that article (in the image to the right) that ProQuest shows all of the subject headings relevant to logistics discussed within the article, locations relevant to INDOPACOM, and the organization in the article. The researcher could check any/all of these boxes to search these terms by Subject, Locations, and Organization to broaden their search and return more results that may be relevant to their research.

Citation Assistance

Look for the quotation marks! When you see these in EBSCO, ABI Inform ProQuest and other databases clicking on the quotation marks icon will prompt the database to cite the work for you in a wide variety of formats which almost always include APA and Chicago. To double check if they are correct (they do make mistakes on occasion) or if you need to create a citation on your own, Purdue OWL is a highly regarded and widely used reference tool for how to create a citation in a variety of formats including Chicago and APA in academic institutions

Questions to Ask! We look forward to your visit.

The most important thing to remember is.....

- 1.) Do you have questions about finding books or articles for your argument paper, mission command paper, or any other assignment?
- 2.) Do you have questions about accessing or searching databases or other online tools?
- 3.) Did you walk into the library and feel completely lost? You want to find a book but you have completely forgotten how to do so?
- 3.) Are looking for a book to read when you can't sleep at night?
- 4.) Are you looking for assistance with some other research?

Just let us know! You can visit us on person, call, or email us for assistance. We are here to help you and look forward to working with you!
